Overview

Executive Summary

Problem Setting

Becoming a parent is a period of intense identity change and inner reflection. This transition can be wonderful but can also be fraught with anxiety. Even before a child in brought into the world, there's a lot to learn. While dads are not experiencing the same physical challenges that moms are, having a child is a major life-changing event that can bring stress and uncertainty to both parents.

The old adage "It takes a village [to raise a child]" rings true today. While the moms we interviewed in our primary research were quick to point to their group of girlfriends and family as a resource and source of support, men were far less inclined to. One dad told us, "I guess my wife does peer talk with other new moms...She'll talk to them about the experience of going through such things." Research has indicated that when dealing with stress, men are reluctant to reach out for help due to fear and the social stigma against men showing weakness or vulnerability.

While there is seemingly an endless number of online platforms for new moms to share information and discuss motherhood, there's not much out there for dads. Juneau hopes to change that.

What Juneau Does

At its core, Juneau allows both expectant and new fathers engage in community discussion about fatherhood. Forums allow for topics ranging from the practical (what should I pack in my hospital overnight bag for the birth?) to the more abstract (how do I be a good dad?).

Juneau meets users where they are. Whether a user wants to directly message another user, or wishes to post an anonymous discussion, Juneau has several ways for users to participate.

It's our hope that Juneau will help dads through their journey while also normalizing asking for help and talking about questions and concerns big and small.

You mentioned that you're the first dad-to- be to take advantage of this policy but if new noms have taken it, the process should be exactly the same. My advice is that if they let you split the leave (say, take 2 weeks off right at the birth, and then every Friday off until he days runs out, I'd go that route. It ended aving my wife and I a lot of money in nanny ees and it was nice to ease back into work.	2nd trimester Pater Finance Image: A state of the stat	discussion	2nd trimester Pa Finance + Character Pa Reply to join the second seco	ne discussion

VISUAL SYSTEM Moodboard

Juneau's design principles are hinted at in its mood board: a clean modern style, but a style that's inclusive to all types of dads; soft gradient waves that hint at the northern lights and a streamlined visual identity that keeps the focus on the content.

Since the app will be used by males, we wanted to design to that, but not in a contrived way. Our color palette consisting of a navy blue, a teal, and an azure blue is simple and used sparingly in an attempt to keep the focus on the app's content.

Our gradients were inspired by the aurora borealis. We wanted the soft gradients to feel welcoming and bright.

Wow, so great that your company has that. I used to live in Europe and paternity leave was common (maybe required?) and moving back to the US was quite a shock.
